Michael Smith, born in South

Orange, New Jersey. Michael relocated to the windy city and became a regular at venues such as The Earl of Old Town, Somebody Else's Troubles, Holstein's, No Exit and Orphan's. Michael played the Philadelphia Folk Festival, worked with Corky Siegel and John Prine, taught at the Old Town School of Folk Music. Michael was asked to write the music for the Steppenwolf production of John Steinbeck's The Grapes of Wrath, and he toured with that production for two years: Chicago, La Jolla, London, England, finally Broadway, (the Cort Theatre— where the Marx Brothers played) and was thrilled by two Antoinette Perry awards (Tonys) for that production.
